SKETCHES OF WASHINGTON'S PALLBEARERS.

Col. Denois Ramsay, was born in Alexandria in 1756. He was a son of William Ramsay, who came from Galloway, Scotland, and sattled in Belle Haven, and was one of the organizers and first trustees of the town of Alexandris. Mr. Ramsay served all through out the revolutionory war, with distinc-tion, rising from the rank of captain which he held at his entrance into the army to that of colonel. He married Miss Jane Taylor daughter of Jessie Taylor, a merchant of Belfast, Ireland, who emigrated to America during the revolution in a vefsel owned by himself and lauded at Williams urg, Virgicis, in 1783, and from thence came in the same year to Alexandria. Mr. Ramsay and his wife were the parents of nine children. Col. Ramsay was a member of Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons, joining the Lodge, in 1783, and was a most z-alous member of the order, serving for over twenty years as a member and an officer of the A exandria Lodge. Col. Ramsay died in Alexaudria on September 10, 1810, at the age of fifty-four. One of his sons, William, served as an officer in the Alex andria Blues, in the war of 1812. Robert T., another son, was an Alexandri merchant for many years and was one of the Masons present at the Masonic barquet given to Lafayette at his visit to this city in 1825. Col Charles Little, one of the pall-bearers at the funeral of Gen. Washington, came of Scotch stock and served as an officer in the revolution with the Vir ginia Continental troops. In 1794, when the "whisky insurrection," as it is called in history, broke out in western Pennsylvania, and all peaceable means of forcing the people of that section to obey the law imposing duties on domestic distilled liquor had failed,

President Washington ordered troops from Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and New Jersey to suppress the in surrection which had arisen against au-thority. Col. Little commanded in one of the companies from Fairfax county. At the last public celebration of the Fourth of July at which Washington was ever present, which took place in Alexandria in 1798, when the great chief reviewed the Alexandria militis, Col. Little acted as his aide, reviewing the troops on King street, after which the soldiers attended se Church. . Alexandria at this time boasted a company of artillery, com-manded by Captain William Harper, a company of cavalry, commanded by Capt. Robert Young, afterwards General Young of the war of 1812, and in the throat and to stop a cough by the use of One Minute Cough Cure. This remedy quickly cures all forms of throat and lung traubles. Harmless and pleasant to take. It prevents consumption. A famous specific for grippe and its after effects. a company of infantry, commanded by Capt. George Deneale. General Was:

ington again reviewed the troops, on this occasion, after the anniversary this occasion, after the anniversary dinner which he attended at Spring Garden outside of the town, complimenting very highly their military appearance. Colonel Little survived his chief fourteen years, living until 1813, when he died at his residence of "Denbeigh," Fairfax county. Mr. Alexander Little his great-great nephew. was in Little, his great-great nephew, was, in after years, the editor of the Fredericksburg News. Col. Philip Marsteller, the fifth of Washington's pallbearers, was the only one of them who was not a Mason, and a member of Alexandria-Washington lodge. He was born in Lances er county, Pennsylvania, and commanded regiment from that S.ate, during the revolutionary war. At the close of the revolution he settled in Alexandria, and was engaged in the auction and commission business. He had three sors. One of them. Philip G. Marsteller, attended the funeral lodge and was also present at the funeral of General Washington being then a young man of about 27 years. He afterwards engaged in the same business as his father and died near Haymarket, Va., in 1842. Lawis, nother son, died in the service of the United States 'rom wounds received in the "whisky insurrection," in Pennsylvania, in 1794, in which Col. Coarles Little, another of Washington's pallbearers, also took part as commander of some of the Virginia troops. Ferdinand, another son, was born in Alex-andria and died there at the age of 38. Col. Philip Marsteller, Washington's pallbearer, slso died in Alexandria in

Col. George Gilpin, Alexandria's pos master from 1809 to 1813, was appointed by Alexandria-Washington Lodge to be one of Washington's pallbearers. He was in attendance at the lodge when Washington's death was his burial. He died at Alexandria on December 27, 1813, and at his burial received Masonic honors.
